ONE NET-ONE LIFE PROJECT

When a child in Africa goes to sleep at night, there's something they're more afraid of than leopards, snakes, or even lions...

...you might say it's their worst nightmare...

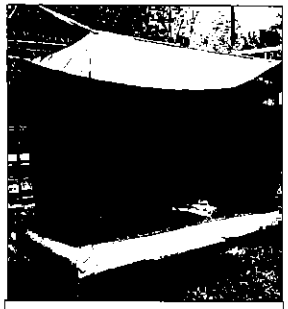
The Reality

It's the mosquitoes! These small insects carry a disease called malaria. Malaria kills about 3000 people in Africa every day, and most of them are children. That's about one every 30 seconds. There are medicines that help prevent malaria, and some treatments to make you get better once you get it, but these are often expensive.

One of the best ways to avoid malaria is to keep the mosquitoes away at night—when they like to come out—by using a mosquito net over a child's bed.

The Mission

With the inspiration of the New Community Project, Oakland City University, Indiana Women's Prison campus, has established the One Net-One Life Project. Instead of the typical cone shaped net we have created a unique rectangular design that has solid material on the top and bottom of the net. The benefits of this design—it prevents the spread of malaria and secondary diseases and infections caused by rodent droppings and termite dust that may seep through the holes of the net. Our passion is to make enough nets to furnish an entire village of 4000 in Africa.



New Mosquito Net Design

Currently we have enough materials to make 350 nets. This is just the start. You have the tools to help these children! By sending donations to the One Net-One Life Project you can make a difference.
