

See The World Through a Bug's Eyes

By Barbara Cummings

Interpretive Naturalist, Turkey Run & Shades State Parks

If you'd like to see the world through insect eyes, cut 6 soda straws in half. Bundle all 12 pieces together and wrap a rubber band or some tape around them to hold them together. Hold the bundle out several inches from your face and look through the straws. First look at something that's holding still. Then look at something that's moving, like a car or a jogger. Notice which one you can see best.
