Madison Correctional Facility Offenders Secure Welding Certification

For Immediate Release

Madison Correctional Facility recognized ten offenders on Monday that recently passed certification through the American Welding Society. These women represent the first welding class conducted through a partnership with the Indiana Department of Correction, Ivy Tech Community College, River Valley Resources and the Department of Workforce Development.

“The women have completed a number of programs during their incarceration” noted Jan Davis, Warden. “Governor Holcomb’s commitment to increase the workforce skill level of all Hoosiers insures these women the opportunity to become employed at a higher rate of pay.”

The Indiana Department of Correction has initiated several certificate programs geared at making offenders more employable upon release.
