HOW TO BE A GOOD ROAD MODEL

Safe Driving Tips
For Parents of Young Drivers

TIPS ON BEING A BETTER ROAD MODEL

Motor vehicle collisions are the leading cause of death for American teens. As a result, thousands of young drivers are killed on our nation's roadways each year. In Indiana alone, 136 fatal collisions involved young drivers in 2008.

Whether your teen is just about to receive their license or if they've had it several months, it is important to remind them about being a responsible driver.

Setting a positive example and encouraging safe driving behaviors could save your teen's life.

Learning Starts at Home

As a parent, you should:

- Avoid eating, talking on your cell phone, or playing with the radio while driving.
- Expose your teen to different driving conditions such as wet roads, snow, and roadways both day and night.
- Take time to supervise your teen while they are driving even after they receive their license.
- Become familiar with Indiana's Graduated Driver's Licensing (GDL) laws.

Safety Fact

Seatbelts can increase your chances of survival in a crash by 45 percent.

Risk factors for young driver collisions include:

- Inexperience;
- Greater propensity for risk-taking;
- Inadequate driving skills;
- Driving while impaired; and
- In-vehicle driver distractions (e.g. passengers and telecommunications devices).

Did You Know?

With three or more passengers, teens are four to five times more likely to be involved in a fatal crash.

Set the Rules—And Live By Them

- Enforce Indiana's laws concerning young drivers.
- Make your teen pay for their own tickets.
- Limit the number of passengers—even after their first 180 days with a license.
- Enforce severe, long-term consequences for driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs.
- Require your teen to wear a seatbelt at all times—it's the law and it could save their life!

Remember:

YOUR RULES TODAY MAY
SAVE YOUR TEEN'S LIFE LATER!
