All ads and news releases contained in the “Safe Passage” kit are designed so that your local printer can easily enlarge or reduce them to fit their needs. The ads can also be reproduced as posters.

How to use Ads, Press Releases and Radio Announcements

The special-purpose ads and press releases you’ll find here, clearly labeled, are designed to be run in your community newspaper or other local publications. The radio announcements are designed to be played on local radio stations. It usually costs money to run advertising. However, most newspapers and magazines have a policy of running some “public service” ads on a no-cost basis. The enclosed ads would qualify as public service ads, since they come from a worthy cause and a non-profit organization.

What to do

Since public service ads are run on a voluntary basis, it helps if you have a friend at the publication or radio station. First ask your members if any of them know someone at your local newspaper or other publication. If so, ask the contact to arrange running your ads.

The advertising materials enclosed are “reproduction” quality materials—that is, the publication can use them directly for producing your ads. At the bottom, you will note that the signature refers to “your local fire department.” If you wish, the publication can substitute an actual name, such as Smithville Volunteer Fire Department. Just specify the exact name you want and the publication will generally set the type for you free of charge.

Who to contact

Most often the editor or managing editor has responsibility for public service ads. Just identify yourself and explain that you’d like to arrange for running some public service ads. In addition to your local newspaper, don’t overlook special purpose publications which might welcome the chance to run your ads. Some examples: civic organization publications, trade show programs, homeowners associations, high school newsletters and others.

The sooner firefighters can reach the scene of an emergency, the better. The lives of your neighbors, your friends—even your family—could hang in the balance. We lose critical time if you don’t make way.

Help emergency vehicles get to the scene quickly and safely.

• Be alert. When you hear a siren or see emergency warning lights, signal and quickly pull to the right and stop.
• Drive defensively. Be prepared to stop at any intersection even if you don’t have to.
• Yield the right-of-way. Stay put until you’re sure all emergency vehicles have passed by safely.

Remember, we’ll do our part if you do yours. Help us get there quickly and safely.

Be Alert!
