limestone quarries near the mouth of the creek, but soon ran into problems getting the cut rock across the river to the railroad line.

The turning point in McCormick's Creek history came in 1888, when part of the area was purchased by Frederick Denkewalter, a physician interested in the site's scenic and restful qualities. Dr. Denkewalter saw the tranquil peace of the canyon and its surrounding cliffs as the perfect location for a sanitarium, a place for the wealthy and weary to "get away from it all" and recuperate.

The original sanitarium, built on the present-day Canyon Inn site, was a white-sided structure with long porches on every side. It offered guests plenty of access to the loveliness of the well-landscaped grounds, where Denkewalter planted a variety of trees and shrubs. Meanwhile, local residents continued to picnic and hike along the canyon, making the spot a favorite of everyone for rest and relaxation.

With the death of Dr. Denkewalter in 1914, his estate went up for sale at a land auction. Both Owen County and the State of Indiana were interested in maintaining McCormick's Creek in its park-like setting, so the land was purchased. McCormick's Creek State Park was dedicated as Indiana's first state park on July 4, 1916, as part of the state's centennial celebration.

Canyon Inn opened its doors in the old sanitarium building. A few years later in the early 1920s, the building was remodeled and new brick siding was added. Later changes brought new wings, a banquet room, swimming pool and recreation center, but the inn still rests on the original foundations.

Originally a little more than 350 acres, McCormick's Creek State Park grew to its present size through acquisition of surrounding farms and homesteads as they came up for sale. Much of the park's building improvements came in the 1930s, when the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) was in the park. The CCC men constructed most of the shelter houses, the old stone bridge, and the fire tower. Another surge of development came in the early 1970s, when the present campgrounds, Nature Center and swimming pool were added. Today the park is a delightful combination of history set in modern surroundings.

THIS IS YOUR PARK

Visitors shall observe the following rules, which are designed to fulfill the purpose for which state parks were established, namely, to preserve a primitive landscape in its natural condition for the public's use and enjoyment.

Please let wild animals remain wild.

Feeding wildlife is prohibited. Feeding of wild animals can result in harm to both animals and people. Animals who depend on handouts become a nuisance to visitors and a danger to themselves. Please lock up all food and coolers inside cars or campers. Roll up car windows tightly.

INDIANA

CREEK
STATE PARK

Founded in 1916 as Indiana's first state park, McCormick's Creek has a rich history. Its earliest history is reflected in its geology: fossilized corals tell of Indiana's time as a shallow, tropical ocean, bits of granite brought here from Canada share our glacial story, and flint artifacts tell part of our Native American history. McCormick's Creek and southern Indiana were shared hunting grounds for the Delaware, Miami, and Shawnee before their forced removal.

In 1816, the area's first settler, John McCormick, homesteaded nearly 100 acres along the canyon by the waterfalls. Since it was then common practice to name physical landmarks after the people who owned them, the area became McCormick's Creek.

Early residents in the area cut timber, grazed livestock on the steep slopes and farmed small patches of flat upland ground. They also tried building sawmills on the creek, but the water level and force were never great enough to make them profitable. Other enterprising businessmen opened
