As the name suggests, Mounds State Park contains and preserves some of the finest examples of earthwork and mound building in Indiana. Built by the Adena and Hopewell cultures around 160 B.C., the 10 mounds and earthworks within park boundaries range in size from a few inches tall to several feet high. These mounds were used primarily for ceremonial, celebration, and observation of solstices, equinoxes and stellar events. Research indicates that these mounds were used to track the seasons, the positions of more than 100 of the brightest stars, as well as those of the moon and visible planets. The largest and best preserved of the park's mounds is the "Great Mound," easily accessed by Trail 1. Technically referred to as a "circular enclosure," this earthwork is the largest of its kind in the state, and is nearly a quarter-mile in circumference.

Please let wild animals remain wild. Feeding of all wild animals can result in harm to both animals and people. Animals who are used to depend on handouts are weak and defenseless and can be easily taken advantage of by predators. Please let wild animals remain wild.
