Book: A remorseless McVeigh calls dead children 'collateral damage'

By The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. - A remorseless Timothy McVeigh calls the children killed in the Oklahoma City bombing "collateral damage," regretting only that their deaths detracted from his bid to avenge Waco and Ruby Ridge, according to a new book.

“I bombed the Murrah Building,” he flatly admits now. In a separate interview, he adds, “I like the phrase ‘shot heard ‘round the world,’ and I don’t think there’s any doubt the Oklahoma City blast was heard around the world.”

...“My decision to take human life at the Murrah Building – I did not do it for personal gain. I ease my mind in that...I did it for the larger good.”
