SLEA: Where Education Encourages Opportunity

The number of teens and predators using Social Networking sites continues to rise across this nation at a steady rate as parents and communities become aware of the vulnerability of our children through these sites. In addition some users of MySpace, FaceBook and Twitter have depicted evidence of criminal offenses they have committed through dialog and/or pictures/videos. Learn how Investigations in these Social Networks can facilitate a successful prosecution of your online targets.

This 8-hour program has been developed to facilitate law enforcement agencies in understanding the use of social networking sites in building complete cases that can ultimately be presented to local prosecutors for charging. Officers attending this training will gain first hand experience in navigating computer sites through the use of the Suburban Law Enforcement Academy's (SLEA) Mobile Computer Lab.

Instructor:

Rich Wistocki is a veteran detective of the Naperville, Illinois Police Department. Rich is a nationally profiled police detective who actively works computer crimes/sexual predator investigations and regularly educates the public on internet safety. Detective Wistocki has been a member of the Illinois ICAC since its inception. Besides many of his career achievements he currently is the law enforcement liaison to MySpace and has assisted law makers all over the country in producing legislation against internet predators
