Meet Sky Simpson, the 2010 Fly-in Honorary Grand Marshall...

Sky's the Limit

by Nancy Simpson

Our son Sky is a lively boy with an easy smile. We've often been asked about his name - "Sky."

In his father's family, his grandfather, father and oldest brother shared the same name - Sr., Jr. and the III, respectively. So Sky's dad wanted to start this tradition with his own son. I wasn't in love with the idea, especially having two "Steve's" in the house. I didn't want "Big Steve", "Little Steve", etc. The middle name and its variations didn't work for me either. And of course Steve didn't like any of the names I liked.

I had to come up with a very suitable nickname. I discovered "Sky" in a book – the name of an adult male character. "Sky Simpson" sounded great. I had found it! And I loved it. Even Steve liked it. OK, we could start the tradition!

Then we learned our baby-to-be had Down syndrome. After a little while, I wondered out loud if we should still call him "Sky". We were questioning everything, as if it mattered what we named our precious boy.

I remember it so clearly – a cloudy but still warm fall morning. We were moving around the kitchen. "The Sky's the limit," I said and we stopped and looked at each other. "Yeah!" said Steve emphatically.

And so the journey began...
