Summary of Legislation: The bill establishes notice and hearing procedures for the Indiana Department of Transportation to establish rights-of-way for additions to the state highway system.

Effective Date: July 1, 2007.

Explanation of State Expenditures: Costs for establishing a right-of-way for additions to the state highway system could increase for the Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) to hold hearings, record documents, and publish notices. Also, the bill specifies the date on which the fair market price for property purchased or taken by eminent domain is determined. INDOT is funded by both state General Fund and, for highways, the Motor Vehicle Highway Account.

Background: The bill requires INDOT to conduct a public hearing in at least one county in which the right-of-way is located after publishing notice of the meeting in the newspaper of each county involved. INDOT has to provide a map of the property to be acquired and then, once approved at the public meeting, record the approval and the map with the recorder in each county in which property is to be acquired. INDOT also must announce the recording in each county where the approval and map are recorded.

The bill specifies that the fair market value for purchased property is the date of purchase, while the fair market value for property acquired by eminent domain is determined on the date the complaint in condemnation is filed. For agricultural land, the fair market price is determined under IC 32-24-1 concerning eminent domain.

Background - Financial: In 2006, expenditures from the Joint Federal & State Allotment Right-of-Way Account of the state General Fund totaled $56.6 M for land and structures. The amount included $17.2 M for condemnation, $34.6 M for land purchases, $1.1 M for highway relocation expenses, and $3.6 M in other associated costs.
