“What is a normal day like for you?”

During session, my days are packed with meetings, committee hearings, more meetings, session and more meetings.

My days begin as early as 7 a.m. and sometimes earlier! I usually have a breakfast meeting with other legislators, lobbyists or constituents from back home concerned about legislation.

As a committee member, I must spend time studying proposed legislation. In committee meetings, we also listen to the public testify on different bills.

Session is very time-consuming. There have been days when we are in session for more than 12 hours listening to debate on bills and casting our votes.

I also make an effort to meet with constituents who are visiting the Statehouse during session. Many school groups visit when learning about Indiana History in class.

There are times when my day does not end until the next day!

Also, just because we are not in session 365 days a year doesn't mean we stop working for you. As a matter-of-fact, when I'm back home, I spend a lot of time attending meetings and community events.

It's critical for lawmakers to spend time with the people they represent.

“How much do you get paid, and what are your working hours?”

The Indiana General Assembly is a “citizen legislature”— which means that our state representatives and state senators have full-time jobs in addition to serving in the legislature.

My annual salary changes every year based on the salaries of trial court judges.

The Indiana Constitution allows state lawmakers to receive a “per diem,” or daily allowance. During session, I receive $152 a day and I receive $60.80 a day for legislative business conducted during the interim, or out of session.

Lawmakers are provided a per diem to help them cover the day-to-day expenses they incur in fulfilling their legislative duties. For example, I use my per diem to pay for food, hotel rooms, and other related expenses while I am away from home and in session.

As to working hours, there is no set schedule. Although Indiana has a “part-time legislature,” I am on the job year-round.

“Can I be a State Legislator?”

Not yet, but definitely in a few years! There are certain requirements you must meet in order to become a state legislator.

To be a state legislator, you must:

Have lived in your district for at least 1 year

Be a citizen of the United States

Be at least 25 years old to run for the Indiana Senate

Be at least 21 years old to run for the Indiana House

Have lived in Indiana for 2 years

“What do Indiana Legislators do for a living?”

Indiana has what is called a part-time citizen legislature. Indiana lawmakers live, work and raise a family in the district they represent. The state legislature is in session only two to four months a year, which allows lawmakers to spend a great deal of their time at home, in the community they represent.

Here's some of the past and present jobs of Indiana State Senators and Representatives:

- Utilities Services
- Media
- Auctioneer
- Construction
- Insurance
- Not-for-Profit
- Government
- K-12 Education
- Firefighter
- Accountant
- Public Safety
- Banking
- Industry
- Medical
- Higher Education
- Farmer
- Consultant
- Real Estate
- Attorney

Indiana State Government Facts

The Branches of Government

Judicial Branch

The Judicial Branch consists of the Supreme Court, the Appellate Court and Indiana Trial Court. It is the job of the Judicial Branch to uphold the laws of the state and our nation.

Chief Justice
Randall T. Shepard

Executive Branch

The Executive Branch administers the state government and enforces state laws. This branch consists of 7 Constitutional offices elected by the citizens of Indiana. These offices are: Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor, Attorney General, and Superintendent of Public Instruction.

This branch also consists of over 70 state agencies, as well as, boards and commissions that report to the Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

Governor
Mitch Daniels

Legislative Branch

The Legislative Branch is the “voice of the people” and writes the laws that we must follow. The legislature has two chambers, the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Indiana’s General Assembly is a part-time legislature, which means that its members are only in session for a few months each year. However, the members of the General Assembly and their staff work year-round.

The General Assembly

House of Representatives

In the Indiana House of Representatives, the Speaker of the House presides over the members while they are in session. The House consists of 100 members, making it twice as big as the Senate. Each representative represents approximately 60,000 Hoosiers and is elected to two-year terms.

House Speaker
Brian Bosma

Senate

In the Indiana Senate, the Lieutenant Governor presides over the members and may cast tie-breaking votes. The Senate President Pro Tempore is the second highest-ranking member of the Senate and the highest-ranking senator. The Senate consists of 50 members, half as many as the House. Each senator represents approximately 120,000 Hoosiers and is elected to four-year terms.

Lt. Governor
Becky Skillman

Senate President Pro Tempore
David Long

“How does a bill become a law?”

It all begins with an idea from people in the community...

The people in the community call their local legislator to tell him or her about their idea.

Then the LONG process begins...

1. Bill Introduction

The first step in creating the laws we live by is for a legislator to write the bill. After the bill is drafted, it is then introduced by the author in either the House or the Senate. The author of the bill tries to get as many other legislators as possible to support the bill in hopes of making it a law.

2. First Reading

The bill is presented to the House or the Senate and assigned to a committee.

3. Committee Reading

After a bill has been assigned to a committee, the committee will talk about the good and bad aspects of the bill. The public can attend the committee meetings and offer input on the proposal. After this is done, the committee will decide if the bill is one that should become a law. At this time, they can make changes to the bill. From there, the committee votes to pass the bill on to the full House or Senate for more study.

4. Second Reading

The author or any legislator can try to amend, or change, the bill. A majority is required to approve an amendment.

5. Third Reading

At this stage, the full House or Senate will vote to approve or defeat the bill. Again, a majority (51 votes in the House and 26 in the Senate) is needed to approve the

If a bill makes it here, it's a law!

8. The Governor

The governor has several options when he receives a bill. He can sign the bill into law, veto (reject) it, or do nothing. If he does nothing, the bill will become law without his signature in 7 days. Legislators can override vetoes with a majority vote.

7. Conference Committees

After the bill has been considered by the other chamber, three things can happen:

- (A) If no changes have been made, it is sent to the governor.
- (B) If the bill is amended in the 2nd house, it must return to the house it began in so the changes can be approved or turned down. If the changes are agreed upon, the bill goes to the governor. However, if the majority of the original house disagrees, the bill is sent to a conference committee for more discussion. A conference committee is made up of two representatives and two senators. These four legislators study the bill and come up with an agreement, which is then voted on by both houses. If both houses approve the amended bill, it is sent to the governor.
- (C) The bill can be killed.

6. The Other Chamber

If the bill is approved in the house of origin, it moves to the 2nd house, or chamber, where it goes through the same process again. All approved House bills move to the Senate and all approved Senate bills move to the House. At this time, the bill may be approved, amended or defeated.
