Taxpayer protests the Department's assessment for the 2011 tax year.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Taxpayer is an individual who has resided in Qatar since 2010. The Indiana Department of Revenue ("Department") determined that Taxpayer was an Indiana resident for the tax year 2011 based upon information received indicating that he held an Indiana driver's license and that he had listed an Indiana address on his Federal income tax return. The Department, therefore, issued a proposed assessment for 2011 for income tax, penalty, and interest.

Taxpayer protested the proposed assessment. An administrative phone hearing was held. This Letter of Findings ensues and addresses Taxpayer's protest of the proposed assessment for the tax year 2011. Additional facts will be provided as necessary.

I. Indiana Individual Income Tax - Residency - Domicile.

DISCUSSION

As a threshold issue, all tax assessments are prima facie evidence that the Department's claim for the unpaid tax is valid; the taxpayer bears the burden of proving that any assessment is incorrect. IC § 6-8.1-5-1(c); Lafayette Square Amoco, Inc. v. Ind. Dep't of State Revenue, 867 N.E.2d 289, 292 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2007); Ind. Dep't of State Revenue v. Rent-A-Center East, Inc., 963 N.E.2d 463, 466 (Ind. 2012). Thus, the taxpayer is required to provide documentation explaining and supporting his challenge that the Department's assessment is wrong. Poorly developed and non-cogent arguments are subject to waiver. Scopelite v. Ind. Dep't of Local Gov't Fin., 939 N.E.2d 1138, 1145 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2010); Wendt LLP v. Ind. Dep't of State Revenue, 977 N.E.2d 480, 486 n.9 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2012).

Indiana imposes a tax "upon the adjusted gross income of every resident person, and on that part of the adjusted gross income derived from sources within Indiana of every nonresident person." IC § 6-3-2-1(a). For income tax purposes, "The term 'resident' includes (a) any individual who was domiciled in this state during the taxable year, or (b) any individual who maintains a permanent place of residence in this state and spends more than one hundred eighty-three (183) days of the taxable year within this state" IC § 6-3-1-12; see also 45 IAC 3.1-1- 21. A nonresident is "any person who is not a resident of Indiana." IC § 6-3-1-13.

To establish a new domicile, a taxpayer "must be physically present at a place, and must have the simultaneous intent of establishing a home at that place." 45 IAC 3.1-1-22. For income tax purposes, "a person has only one domicile at a given time even though that person maintains more than one residence at that time." Id. Additionally, "[o]nce a domicile has been established, it remains until the conditions necessary for a change of domicile occur." Id. "To effect a change of domicile, there must be an abandonment of the first domicile with an intention not to return to it, and there must be a new domicile acquired by residence elsewhere with an intention of residing there permanently, or at least indefinitely." Croop v. Walton, 157 N.E. 275, 278 (Ind. 1927).

In State Election Bd. v. Bayh, 521 N.E.2d 1313 (Ind. 1988), the Indiana Supreme Court considered the standard by which "domicile" –and thus residency–is established. The court determined that Mr. Bayh met the residency requirement for the office of Governor because Mr. Bayh's domicile remained in Indiana even though he moved to different states for various reasons for many years. Specifically, the court explained, in relevant part:

Once acquired, domicile is presumed to continue because every man has a residence somewhere, and . . . he does not lose the one until he has gained one in another place. Establishing a new residence or domicile terminates the former domicile. A change of domicile requires an actual moving with an intent to go to a given place and remain there. It must be an intention coupled with acts evidencing that intention to make the new domicile a home in fact . . . [T]here must be the intention to abandon the old domicile; the intention to acquire a new one; and residence in the new place in order to accomplish a change of domicile. A person who leaves his place of residence temporarily, but with the intention of returning, has not lost his original residence.

Id. at 1317 (internal quotations and citations omitted). The Indiana Supreme Court went on to conclude that:

Residency requires a definite intention and evidence of acts undertaken in furtherance of the requisite intent, which makes the intent manifest and believable. A self-serving statement of intent is not sufficient to find that a new residence has been established. Intent and conduct must converge to establish a new domicile.

Id. at 1318 (internal quotations and citations omitted); see also In the Matter of Evrard, 333 N.E.2d 765, 768 (Ind. 1975) ("The person must show . . . evidence of acts undertaken in furtherance of the requisite intent, which make that intent manifest and believable.")

Additionally, 45 IAC 3.1-1-22 considers the following relevant facts in determining whether a new domicile has been established:

- (1) Purchasing or renting residential property
- (2) Registering to vote
- (3) Seeking elective office
- (4) Filing a resident state income tax return or complying with the homestead laws of a state
- (5) Receiving public assistance
- (6) Titling and registering a motor vehicle
- (7) Preparing a new last will and testament which includes the state of domicile.

These factors are not exclusive in determining an individual's intent to relocate. "The determination of a person's intent in relocating is necessarily a subjective one. There is no one set of standards that will accurately indicate the person's intent in every relocation. The determination must be made on the facts present in each individual case." Id.

During the protest, Taxpayer submitted numerous documents to the Department in support of his argument that he was not an Indiana resident and was domiciled in Qatar during the relevant tax year. Taxpayer provided his residency card for Qatar showing an expiration of July 2012, a Qatar identification card, and his letter of employment for the years 2010-2012. Taxpayer explained that he grew up in Indiana and graduated from an Indiana university in 2001 and moved to Illinois, after that he then moved to Georgia in 2006. Taxpayer also provided his 2006 W-2 from his Illinois employer listing an Illinois address, and his 2009 federal tax return with his Georgia address. Taxpayer also provided his 2009 Georgia state income tax return. Taxpayer explained that the Indiana address used is his wife's family address.

The Department based its assessment on Taxpayer's possession of an Indiana's driver's license and use of an Indiana mailing address. In the course of the protest process, Taxpayer has provided documentation and analysis to support his protest that he was not a resident of Indiana during 2011. However, Taxpayer has not established that he intended to abandon his Indiana domicile. Taxpayer could not show that he took intervene steps to abandon his Indiana domicile. Taxpayer maintains an Indiana Driver's License and an Indiana mailing address, thus showing that his Indiana domicile was never abandoned. Taxpayer has not met his burden of proving the proposed assessment to be incorrect as required by IC § 6-8.1-5-1(c), and he is subject to Indiana income tax for the tax year 2011 because he was a nonresident.

Residency cases are particularly fact sensitive, thus the position relayed within this document pertains only to this case and its specific set of facts.

FINDING

Taxpayer's protest is denied.
