Biographical Note:

James P. Fadely (b. 1953) was born in Henry County, Indiana, and grew up in Middletown. He graduated from Shenandoah High School in 1971 and from Hanover College in 1975 with a degree in history. He taught history at Brookstone School in Columbus, Georgia from 1975-1976. From 1976 to 1979 he studied United States and Latin-American history at Indiana University, where he earned a master's degree in 1977 and a doctoral degree in 1991. From 1979 to 1983 he taught history at Savannah (Georgia) Country Day School. In 1984 he began lecturing in history at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis until 2000. He taught history at St. Richard's Episcopal School in Indianapolis from 1988 to 2000, where he was also Director of Admission and Financial Aid. He currently serves as Director of College Counseling at University High School of Indiana (UHS) in Carmel, where he has also taught American history.

He unsuccessfully ran for Congress in 1990 as the Democratic candidate against incumbent Dan Burton in the 6th Indiana District.

He is a member of the Indiana Association for College Admission Counseling (IACAC) and the National Association for College Admission Counseling (NACAC). He is the author of Thomas Taggart: Public Servant, Political Boss, 1856-1929 (1997) as well as several articles for the Indiana Magazine of History and Trace of Indiana and Midwestern History.

He is married to Sally Fehsenfeld Fadely and has two children.

Scope and Content:

This collection contains papers and materials related to James P. Fadely career as a history teacher and college counselor in central Indiana.

The first series relates to his time teaching history at secondary school at St. Richard's School in Indiana and private schools in Georgia. The collection includes all of his lesson plans, class handouts, tests, essay prompts, and his personal notes as well as the history textbook, Rise of the American Nations, used by Dr. Fadely at the Savannah Country Day School. This series also contains materials related to the annual eighth grade trip to Washington D.C., the eighth grade research paper, and student evaluations for U.S. History class.

Most of the papers relate to the planning and founding of University High School, a private, non-sectarian college preparatory school in Carmel, Indiana. The school opened in the fall of 2000 with Fadely serving initially as the director of marketing and public relations before transitioning to serve as the director of college counseling. Faculty meeting minutes, administrative committee minutes, and various studies and accreditation materials provide an insight into how a private school functions. The collection also contains a nearly complete run of The Thursday Times, the weekly faculty newsletter, several years of the Parent Association Newsletter, and a few editions of the infrequently published student newspaper. Fadely also wrote a draft of a 10-year history of the school, which quotations from several founding board members and staff.

His personal papers include correspondence with University alumni and information regarding his membership with the Indiana Association for College Admission Counseling (IACAC) and the National Association for College Admission Counseling (NACAC) as well as the various committees he served on. Also included are files from the Independent Schools Association of the Central States (ISACS) visiting teams, which provide snapshots of the schools being evaluated: LeMans Academy (1990), The Orchard School (1992), The Avery Coonley School (2000), and a feasibility study team for Providence Cristo Rey High School (2006).

The collection also contains a thirty second television commercial (VHS) for University High School produced by Ben Rose.

It is likely that there will be additions to the collection in the future.
