Processed by: Amy C. Belcher, 2004

Organizational Note:

Originally known as the Indiana State Highway Commission in 1919, the Indiana Highway and Road Commission was the predecessor to the Indiana Department of Transportation. This commission was in charge of road work, maintenance and design as well as other related duties. There were six different districts to lend themselves to the aid of road care in Indiana in the 1930s-1940s.

Scope and Content Note:

This collection consists of photographs of personnel of the Indiana Highway and Road Commission. Most of the photos are portraits of individuals; however, there are also a few group photographs. Some of the groups in the photographs are identified fully, but there are a couple of groups that only a few members were known. There are thirty-seven photographs identified within the collection and twenty-eight unidentified photographs. These photographs seem to cover the 1930s through the 1940s, as far as can be outlined using Commission reports that include personnel lists.
