I tried but I cannot keep my opinion to myself.

If you are upset that a man who has spent his life advocating for gun rights is speaking on a college campus (a school) and gets shot and killed by a crazy person with a gun then you are the problem. Should he have been shot, no. Is it terrible, yes. However, should all the children who have been shot or innocent people who have been shot and killed been shot and killed? No. Every time there's a school shooting or innocent bystander shooting, Charlie Kirk leads the "thoughts and prayers" train. He openly said, "I think it's worth it. I think it's worth to have a cost of, unfortunately, some gun deaths every single year so that we can have the Second Amendment to protect our other God-given rights." So...he and many others from the cult have agreed that gun reform is not a necessity and it's okay if some people die. Therefore, you do not get to be outraged that he was a victim of the system he created and defended. You do not get to say this was a tragedy. It's his (and others like him) fault.

a victim of the system he created and defended. You do not get to say this was a tragedy. It's his (and others like him) fault.

Also...if you are making stupid posts about how tragic this is and you are not also as appalled at the school shootings and making posts about how tragic they are then I again say you are the problem. A tragedy is something unpredicted. What happened was predictable and many of us having been asking to fix it. Just because it happens to someone it's "not supposed to" doesn't make it more tragic than all of the other gun violence. Gun reform is the only thing that will fix this.

On one final note, were the flags lowered to half staff every time there's a school shooting? No. So...why would we lower them for one of the protectors of the problem?

So what do we do when our children do not feel comfortable being in the same building as her because she stated people of differing opinions of her are "cult members and part of the problem"?

I believe your children have [REDACTED]
BGHS building for a portion of the day, and while they are at BGHS, they do not need to interact with Mrs. Swan.

to Stacey, ....

Yes they do have those courses. You still aren't answering the question of being in the same building as a woman that is stating they are a "cult" and "part of the problem"! Meaning she does not accept other differing opinions and thoughts as herself. It comes across as you guys do not care that she has made students feel threatened by just her presence. Let alone how it makes students feel that are in her class which I know several. This is a huge problem that needs to be addressed, not be pushed to the side as if nothing has happened.

Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for your follow-up email. I understand your concerns and want to assure you that we take matters regarding staff conduct seriously.

As previously stated, our expectation is that all staff follow the approved curriculum and treat students and families with dignity and respect. While I cannot and will not discuss individual personnel matters, please know that concerns brought to our attention are reviewed and addressed in accordance with district policy.

Our focus is on maintaining a safe, respectful, and supportive environment for all students. Should your children experience specific issues at school, please communicate those directly with Mr. Corman so they can be addressed through the proper channels.
