

INDIANA

GRADUATE MEDICAL RESIDENCY PROGRAM

NEED

Each year, Indiana loses 133 quality resident physicians to other states

Indiana will need an additional 817 primary care physicians by 2030

Nearly 70% of doctors end up practicing medicine near the location of their residency programs

GOAL

BY 2024, expand the number of physicians training in Indiana by over

350

PLAN

Indiana lawmakers created the Graduate Medical Education (GME) Board in 2015 to expand graduate medical education residency opportunities across the state. Since the Board's inception, the Indiana General Assembly has provided continued funding for the state's GME Expansion Plan ($6 million in 2015 and 2017 and $8 million in 2019). Indiana has increased the number of resident physicians by over 70, and residency slots by more than 220. Continued investment in the state's physician pipeline is critical to meeting increasing primary care physician demand, especially in rural and underserved areas, increasing positive health outcomes, and increasing the quality of life for all Hoosiers.

BENEFIT

On average, every resident physician who becomes a primary care physician within an underserved area generates a

$3.6 million economic impact on the region.

On average, every resident physician generates

$1.5 million each year they remain in a community to practice medicine.

Each physician's practice within the community on average creates an additional

6-7 JOBS

Statewide, the economic impact of current and planned new resident physicians from Indiana medical resident programs is expected to reach

$332 million by 2025
