Subject: The Growth Project

This is from Daniel Melson.

Synopsis of The Growth Project:

The Growth Project: Cultivating Skills for Life is a focused 4-week youth development program designed to address critical challenges faced by youth in Floyd County, Indiana, such as juvenile delinquency, substance abuse, and family instability. Through four interactive 3-hour sessions, the program empowers youth and their families by building essential skills in emotional intelligence, family communication, conflict resolution, academic success, and community engagement. Utilizing evidence-based practices—including cognitive-behavioral techniques, family systems therapy, and social-emotional learning—The Growth Project employs experiential learning activities led by community professionals and stakeholders. Its collaborative and outcome-oriented approach aims to foster positive behaviors, strengthen family and community ties, improve academic outcomes, and build resilience, ultimately supporting healthier futures for participating youth.

Ideal Candidate:

The ideal candidate for The Growth Project is a youth from Floyd County who is experiencing risk factors such as difficulty managing emotions, family communication challenges, academic struggles, or negative peer influences. They may exhibit behaviors associated with juvenile delinquency or face instability at home. This candidate is motivated—or can be supported—to engage actively in group discussions, role-playing, journaling, and creative activities designed to develop emotional regulation, conflict resolution, decision-making, and goal-setting skills. Ideal participants are open to collaborating with peers and community mentors, seeking to improve their personal, academic, and social outcomes and willing to strengthen their connections with family and community. Families of these youth are also encouraged to participate to reinforce supportive environments at home.
