Summary Paragraph

The two-story brick Italianate cube was built in 1879 for William F. and Mary Wagoner. A one-story kitchen with shed roof and gabled summer kitchen were an early addition to the back of the house or original to the construction of the home. About 1910, a wrap-around porch featuring cast concrete block and columns was added by the second owners.

Narrative Description

The two-story brick Italianate cube was built by the William F. Wagoner family in 1879 on the north side of the main route leading east from the town of Flora to the Michigan Road. The Wagoners purchased 60 acres and constructed the home which served as the homestead for the family farm. By 1910, a wrap-around porch with cast concrete block and columns replaced a smaller, original porch centered on the façade over the original central entry (photo 01). A late 20th century family room and garage were attached to the northwest corner of the home off the kitchen.

A wide gravel drive leads from State Road 18 to the north, wrapping around to the attached garage on the west and to an assembly of buildings on the east. The homestead retains two buildings (photo 08) east of the house including a c. 1920 garage (contributing) and pole building (non-contributing). An old iron hand pump (contributing object) is located off the east side of the house. The hand pump (left side of photo 02) is immediately south of a long concrete sidewalk that leads from the east side of the house to the gravel drive. A second concrete walk leads from the drive to a modern wood deck built behind the house (photo 02 and 06). Historic agricultural buildings associated with the farm are no longer extant, but were located northwest and east of the house and included livestock barns.

The two-story, cube house features a brick foundation and walls with 1/1 wood windows with stone sills and segmental brick arches. The windows and doors have metal shutters; the area under the arch is filled with wood. A frieze board tops the second story wall and large wood brackets support the eaves. The pyramidal roof is covered with slates in courses of flat-edged and fish-scale tiles. The home's c. 1910 wraparound porch has a foundation and walls composed of rusticated block in an open-coursing or lattice-like pattern (photos 01-03). The walls are topped with a concrete cap. Square piers with chamfered corners, also composed of rusticated block, rise above the caps and support fluted Doric columns, also concrete. Four columns are located along the front (south) and east façades. The columns support a tall beam with architrave that carries the porch's flat roof. A low-pitched gablet is centered in the front façade at the main entrance to the home (photo 03). A matching gablet is centered in the east façade, however, the east entrance to the porch and home are at the north end of the porch (photo 02).

The front (south, photo 03) façade features an entry composed of wood door with full window, side-lites, and transoms in the east half. The entry was moved from the center of the house to the east when the porch was added. The entry has a lintel composed of three courses of headers. A segmental-arched opening with 1/1 window is in the west half of the first story. Three segmental-arched openings with rectangular 1/1 windows are in the second story of the front façade. The east façade (photo 02) features a wood door with window in the top half in the north end of the cube portion's first story; the transom area of the door is covered with wood. Two 1/1 segmental-arched windows are located south of the door. Two 1/1 segmental-arched windows are located in the second story. The north end of the façade features the side of the brick, one-story gabled summer kitchen. The summer kitchen features two narrow 1/1 wood windows in its east wall and no fenestration in its south-facing wall that terminates the north end of the porch.

The north façade (photo 06) of the cube portion of the house is covered at the bottom with the early addition of summer kitchen and enclosed porch. The second story features two 1/1 segmental-arched windows. The gabled summer kitchen is on the east end of the first story and has a wood door with window in the top half centered in its gable-front wall. A pair of modern casement windows is located in the enclosed porch area west of the summer kitchen. The remaining part of the early addition, at the west end of the first story, is covered with the late 20th century family room and garage addition (right side of photo 06). The late addition features a three-sided bay with tall windows and a porch door in the family room. The garage, located at the north end of the addition, features a pair of metal garage doors in its east wall. The early and late additions are covered with vinyl siding.

The west façade features two bays of 1/1 segmental-arched windows in the cube portion of the house (photo 04). A one-story addition with gabled roof is off the northwest corner of the cube. It features a cutaway corner with 1/1 wood window in its southwest corner. A tall 1/1 wood window is north of the cutaway corner. The late 20th century family room and garage addition extend to the north off this early addition (left half of photo 05). The late addition features three 1/1 wood windows and two brick chimneys. The early and late additions feature vinyl siding and asphalt shingles on their low-pitched gabled roofs.

The interior of the cube is arranged with one large room in the east half (photos 10-11) and two bedrooms in the west half of the first story (photos 12-13). The large room shows traces of the original wall that divided it into two (photo 10, right of center window). The ceiling beams were added when the rooms were combined, likely c. 1910. The staircase is off the southwest corner bedroom and extends up to a landing with open staircase and railing (photo 15). The second story is arranged with three bedrooms (photos 14, 16-18) and a large bathroom in the northeast corner (photo 19). The two-story part has original woodwork, unpainted on the first floor and mostly painted on the second floor. The woodwork features nicely-detailed door and window casings with Eastlake style millwork and carving (photos 20-21), transoms, and five-panel wood doors. The staircase is enclosed on the first floor but features a railing with simple turned balusters on the second floor.

The summer kitchen off the northeast corner of the first story features a small back entry with laundry in its north half and a bathroom in its south half (photo 09). A doorway leads into the modern kitchen which is located in the early porch addition on the back of the house. A small dining room is in the west end (where the cutaway corner is located, photo 22). A doorway leads from the kitchen/dining area into the large family room addition to the north (photo 23). A doorway leads into the garage from the family room.

The original part of the house has wood floors, mostly covered with carpets, and plaster walls, mostly covered with wallpaper. The plaster ceilings are mostly covered with acoustic tiles with narrow cove moldings around the perimeter (c. 1950). The early and late additions have modern finishes including drywall and wood floors.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing.)

- A. Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
- B. Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C. Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.
- D. Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

(Mark "x" in all the boxes that apply.)

- A. Owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes
- B. Removed from its original location
- C. A birthplace or grave
- D. A cemetery
- E. A reconstructed building, object, or structure
- F. A commemorative property
- G. Less than 50 years old or achieving significance within the past 50 years

Period of Significance (justification)

The period of significance begins when the home was constructed in 1879 and concludes c. 1920 when the garage was constructed on the property. The home was sold in 1908 after which time a substantial remodeling was undertaken to construct a wraparound porch and garage. These features are significant to the appearance of the home, therefore, the late date of c. 1920 ends the period of significance.

Criteria Considerations (explanation, if necessary)

N/A

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Wagoner-Ayres House is eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places using criterion C under the area of architecture for significance. The house is one of the best examples of Italianate cube design in Carrollton Township, though altered c. 1910 with construction of an elegant cast concrete wraparound porch. The home's additional features, such as the attached summer kitchen, slate roof, and impressive, milled and carved wood Eastlake interior trim elevates its architectural significance.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Wagoner-Ayres House is a good example of the Italianate style, in cube form, used on the construction of a large brick country home (photo 01). While the house has an addition on the back, it still reads as a cube. The Italianate style was popular between 1850 and 1880, particularly in Midwestern towns where the expansion of railroads brought wealth to communities and created a building boom during the period. The style traces its roots to England as part of the Picturesque Movement; the movement rejected formal classical ideas of art and architecture that were popular for 200 years. The Picturesque Movement emphasized rambling, informal architecture, including rural Italian farmhouses and villas. As the style became popular in the United States, it was often modified and embellished into a truly Americanized style, typically in wooden construction, due to the plentiful timber in America. Cupolas, towers, and bracketed cornices became the style's hallmarks. The first Italianate houses were constructed in the United States in the late 1830s. The style was popularized by house pattern books by Andrew Jackson Downing during the middle part of the 1800s, but its popularity began to wane as it began to be replaced by the Queen Anne style in the last decades of the 19th century.

Wagoner-Ayres House
Name of Property

Carroll County, IN
County and State

The Wagoner-Ayres House's architectural features are in keeping with the popularity of the Italianate style during its construction date of 1879, though its interior woodwork refinements are more in keeping with the Eastlake style, which became popular and sometimes synonymous with the Queen Anne style by 1880. The house has simple brick segmental-arched window openings with stone sills and a bracketed cornice, common features of the style (photos 01-03). The home's baseboards, casings, and transoms over interior doorways are fairly typical of the Italianate style. However, the milled surrounds and corner blocks, some with hand-carved incised floral patterns, give the woodwork a higher level of craftsmanship and sophistication (photos 20-21). The horizontal lathe-turned spindle with finials, resting on small brackets, is an unusual refinement. Much of the first story woodwork remains unpainted.

The house type, the cube form, became popular beginning in the 1850s and may have been the precedent for American four square houses built in the 20th century. The house demonstrates the most common features of Italianate cubes with a low-pitched hipped roof. The early rear addition to the house, likely dating shortly after construction in 1879, features a brick summer kitchen and porch (later enclosed). The attached summer kitchen (right side of photo 02 and left side of photo 06) is an unusual, significant feature in its own right and includes the same level of craftsmanship afforded to the main house in its slate roof construction. While the large wraparound porch is a much later feature, c. 1910, it is also significant in its own right by virtue of its cast block construction, rusticated, and fluted Doric columns. The porch's columns and lattice-like walls of open coursing also add a level of sophistication to the home and bespeak the wealth generated from the Golden Era of agriculture (photo 01).

While not a dominant type, Italianate cube houses are found in most of Indiana's northern counties. The house is one of four Italianate cube houses surveyed in Carrollton Township. Two are listed in the Carroll County Interim Report as notable: the Wagoner-Ayres House and the house at the Wagoner Farm on CR 400 E. The other two are listed in the report as contributing and date to the 1880s. The Wagoner Farm house's front façade appears to be more like what the Wagoner-Ayres House originally was (three bays with small entry porch), but the home's condition is deteriorated and its brackets are far simpler. This makes the Wagoner-Ayres House the best example of the four, even in its c. 1910 altered condition.

Developmental History/Additional historic context information

William F. and Mary Wagoner purchased 60 acres on which the house is located in 1879 and constructed the brick home. William was the son of Martin and Rosanna Wagoner, who emigrated from Ohio to Lafayette, then to Jackson Township, Carroll County about 1832. William was born at his parents' farm in 1851 and married Mary Niccum in 1876. They purchased the 60-acre property in 1879 for $25 an acre, then sold it in 1908 for $120 per acre. The couple raised five children in the home and were members of the Presbyterian Church.

The property was sold to Emerson F. Wagoner, the son of William F. and Mary Wagoner, in 1908. He farmed 120 acres and is likely responsible for making the early 20th century improvements to the home. Emerson married Cora Coldsmith and raised seven children at the home. Emerson Wagoner sold the property to Hoyte Mann in 1939, just before Emerson's death in 1940. Mann founded Mann Chevrolet in 1931 and through his daughter, the Ayres family has retained ownership of the property to today.
