Description: This preserve is located on and protects some of the headwaters of the Little Calumet River. The pond is maintained by a dam that was originally built to provide water power to a former mill on the property. Along with the pond and its associated wetlands, the area contains seeps, spring runs, and upland forest. A variety of sedges are found with marsh marigold, blue flag, swamp thistle, white water lily, sycamore, red maple, and several willows found in the wet areas. In the drier sites there is harbinger of spring, partridge berry, Canada mayflower, large-flowered trillium, several different ferns, pawpaw, round-leaved dogwood, white oaks and white pine. This preserve was purchased with funds from the Indiana Heritage Trust Program. The preserve is managed by the LaPorte County Park Department and is a part of Red Mill County Park.
