of several mounds. Although later cultures, such as the Hopewell, used some of the earthworks for burial purposes, these unique earthen features seem to have been used mostly for astronomical observations and as a prehistoric calendar.

Although much has been learned about the mounds and the people who built and used them, many questions remain unanswered. What happened to the Adena and Hopewell people? Why did they disappear? Although many theories abound, no one has the answers.

In the early 19th century, a family of German immigrants, the Bronnenbergs, made this site their home. Owning more than 600 acres, they operated a large farm, with their fields and pastures located in the present-day picnic areas. They were also known to be lovers of fine horses and would hold races on what is today Mounds Road.

One of the sons, Frederick Bronnenberg Jr., built a two-story brick farmhouse that stands to this day. Constructed in the 1840s, virtually every bit of the house came from the surrounding woodlands—the foundation is limestone quarried from nearby White River, the bricks were handmade on site, and most of the woodwork is tulip tree. In 1897, some of the Bronnenberg land was leased to an amusement park in the southern end of the property. Attractions included a roller coaster, roller skating rink, shooting gallery, carousel, boat rides on the river, and a pavilion with a restaurant on the first floor and a dance hall on the second. Many dance marathons of the “Roaring 20s” were held there. But when the Great Depression began, this business, like so many others, simply failed. The Madison County Historical Society then purchased the land and donated it to the state of Indiana. Mounds Park became Mounds State Park in October 1930.

Please let wild animals remain wild. Feeding of wild animals can result in harm to both animals and people. Animals who depend on handouts become a nuisance to visitors and a danger to themselves. Please lock up all food and coolers inside cars or campers. Roll up car windows tightly.

Visitors shall observe the following rules, which are designed to fulfill the purpose for which state parks were established, namely, to preserve a primitive landscape in its natural condition for the public's use and enjoyment.

As the name suggests, Mounds State Park contains and preserves some of the finest examples of earthwork and mound building in Indiana. Built by the Adena and Hopewell cultures around 160 B.C., the 10 mounds and earthworks within park boundaries range in size from a few inches tall to several feet high. These mounds were used primarily for ceremony, celebration, and observation of solstices, equinoxes and stellar events. Research indicates that these mounds were used to track the seasons, the positions of more than 100 of the brightest stars, as well as those of the moon and visible planets. The largest and best preserved of the park's mounds is the “Great Mound,” easily accessed by Trail 1. Technically referred to as a “circular enclosure,” this earthwork is the largest of its kind in the state, and is nearly a quarter-mile in circumference.

Among the first inhabitants of this area were the Adena, who dated to 1,000 B.C., and were primarily a hunter/gatherer society. They left their mark by the construction
