McCormick's Creek State Park features 14 family cabins. Each cabin contains a living area, bedroom, bathroom, kitchen, deck area, and screened-in porch.

Long before pioneers entered the land now known as McCormick's Creek, the Miami roamed, camping along the banks of the White River to the north and south. Located two miles east of Spencer in the rolling hills of south-central Indiana, McCormick's Creek was dedicated as Indiana's first state park on July 4, 1916. The park originally encompassed 350 acres; it now boasts 1,956 acres of rich and varied natural beauty. One highlight of the park is the mile-long, 100-foot deep canyon through which McCormick's Creek runs. One can explore the subterranean world of Wolf Cave or climb to the top of the 90-foot fire tower.

The Recreation Center is open May through October and provides a variety of games and activities. The Nature Center is open year-round with scheduled naturalist-led activities. The Canyon Inn offers fine dining in a relaxed atmosphere.

Other facilities include an Olympic-sized swimming pool, a saddle barn, tennis courts, picnic shelters, and a diverse network of trails throughout the park.
