developing a game preserve.

At one time the park was widely acclaimed as the "Greatest Wildlife Laboratory in the United States" for its raising of pheasants, quail, raccoons and rabbits. One can still see remnants of their old pens along some of the trails.

By the early 1960s the game-raising program was phased out. In 1962 the park was designated Ouabache State Recreation Area, administered by the Division of State Parks. These days, other than the presence of some of the original buildings, the park's appearance scarcely resembles that of its early existence.

In 1983, the State Recreation Area became a state park. Features include a modern campground, tennis and basketball courts, seasonal naturalist service, picnic areas, playfields, and boating and fishing on 25-acre Kunkel Lake. An exhibit featuring American bison, commonly known as buffalo, is located just north of the fire tower.

An asphalt bike trail, accessible at the entrance gatehouse, connects to a Rivergreenway Trail outside park boundaries and follows the Wabash River to the east edge of Bluffton. This 10-foot-wide paved trail also is popular with hikers and joggers. The entire trail is approximately 3 miles long. Motorized vehicles of any kind are prohibited on the trail.

The Wabash River winds along the southern edge of the park, while County Road 100 South is the northern boundary. Many types of wildlife such as deer, fox and squirrels are frequent companions along park roads and throughout the property. Motorists should watch for park visitors and wildlife. Please obey posted speed limits and drive cautiously.

This area of Wells County was once occupied by the Miami, whose villages flanked the banks of the river that bears the name Wabash. Ouabache is difficult to spell but easy to pronounce, O-ba-chee.

In 1829, the first settler built a cabin along the river, near the eventual state park site. After the Native Americans were removed to reservations in Kansas and Oklahoma during the 1830s and '40s, the area was rapidly settled and cleared for farming.

Ouabache was first acquired and operated as the Wells County State Forest and Game Preserve in the early 1930s. By that time the area had been cleared of most of its mature timber stands and, as a result, was severely eroded. The area gradually returned to a more natural state through the efforts of the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) and the WPA (Works Progress Administration) programs of reforestation and land management. Their major activities included constructing the various buildings and shelters of native stone and timber, planting for a nursery and
