Power of the Prairie: Roots!

Did you know that approximately 70% of the average prairie plant is roots? The leaves, stems and flowers account for only about a third of the total living matter. Some prairie plants are known to have roots that exceed twenty feet deep! Power of the Prairie: Roots! is a reprint from the Prairie Nursery Publication.

William Henry Harrison, then governor of the Indiana Territory, was alarmed by the numbers settling at Prophetstown. He moved 1,200 troops near the site of Prophetstown. The people of Prophetstown, wanting to avoid a fight, yet fearing an attack, decided to strike first in the early morning hours of Nov. 7, 1811. Called the Battle of Tippecanoe, the fighting lasted just two hours. The villagers withdrew through the marsh back to Prophetstown, then fled to Wildcat Creek. Harrison's men burned Prophetstown to the ground.

The park's namesake, Prophetstown, is just one piece of cultural history from this land. Prophetstown is equally rich in natural history and geologic history. Over time, this land has been shaped by ice, water, fire and human hands.

The glaciers made their mark first. Vast quantities of ice moved slowly across this place at least three times, carving the land into gently rolling topography. As the ice receded, rocks carried from the northern part of our continent were left behind. These range in size from large boulders called glacial erratics to the abundant gravel and sand deposits mined commercially today.

As the ice melted, river channels and streams formed. Some waterways formed on the surface. Others became the basis of ample groundwater supply below the surface.

A gravel and soil "dam" holding back glacial Lake Maumee, north of what is now Fort Wayne may have burst, cascading water southwest. This affected the flow and direction of the Wabash River and further carved the landscape. The Tippecanoe River meets the Wabash just upstream from the state park, creating a seasonal wetland that is now an attractive stopping place for shorebirds and waterfowl.

A unique glacial feature of the park is the presence of fens, a type of wetland created when groundwater rich in calcium seeps from a slope and runs downhill.

Rich soil formed over the glacial deposits. The climate was right for the development of vast prairies. Wildflowers flourished among the grasses. Plants dried quickly each season, and fire, generally caused by lightning, released nutrients stored in the massive quantity of flower and grass stems.

Native people learned to use fire to maintain the prairie landscape for hunting. European settlers discovered the rich soil's capacity for growing corn and wheat. Today, the region is part of "America's breadbasket." Original remnants of the tallgrass prairie are found only in cemeteries and along railroad tracks, where soil was left unturned.

Restoring the prairie is a vital part of the mission at Prophetstown. Each year, a few more acres of soil are replanted with a vast array of native grasses and wildflowers. Many of the wildflowers start in the greenhouses located at the park office. Eventually, as much as two-thirds of the park will resemble the landscape seen by our ancestors. We also are removing non-native trees and replanting oaks and other species that were found along river bluffs and in the open woodlands, often called savannas.

DESCRIPTION OF HIKING TRAILS

TRAIL & DESCRIPTION	DISTANCE	DIFFICULTY
Trail 1	2.25 miles	Easy
Starts at the Meadow View family picnic parking lot and winds through a former Christmas tree plantation of Douglas fir and then snakes its way through tallgrass prairie, adjacent to the Prairie View group picnic area, with big bluestem, Indian grass, little bluestem, side oats grama, and black-eyed Susan. The trail continues into a fen and meanders through a marshy area, where you may get your feet wet, before entering a field being invaded by osage orange, wild cherry, mulberry, and multiflora rose. The trail ends at the Meadow View family picnic area parking lot.
Trail 2	1.9 mile	Moderate
Begins on Trail 1, north of the Blazingstar picnic shelter in the Prairie View group picnic area. The trail meanders through the tallgrass prairie before entering a shaded path along scenic Harrison Creek. Wildflowers treat hikers to a display of color as the trail winds through a mixed deciduous forest, past a pond formed by Harrison Creek, and into the fen. The trail continues through a mature sycamore grove before merging with Trail 1 at the fen boardwalk north of the campground.
Trail 3	3 miles	Moderate
Begins off Trail 2 near the east end of the pond and follows a gravel road leading to the confluence of the Wabash and Tippecanoe Rivers where the trail becomes a dirt path. Before reaching the rivers while walking through a large, floodplain prairie, one can observe large wetland restoration projects, a large bottomland forest replacement tree planting, and a river bank stabilization project along the Wabash River; a joint effort between the DNR and INDOT. The trail leads along the Tippecanoe River, across a bottomland prairie and leads hikers to a contour trail providing stunning overlooks of perched fens formed by many hillside seeps. The trail ends near the starting point of the trail just uphill from the north end of the pond. This trail closes during flood events.
Trail 4	3.2 miles	Easy
Begins at Trail 3 near the Tippecanoe River and meanders through a heavily shaded floodplain forest following the river until entering into a floodplain prairie. The trail leads hikers to the furthest northern boundary of the park where it returns upon the same path back to the trail 3. This trail closes during flood events.
Bike/Hiking Trail	5 miles	Easy
This paved trail starts at the park gatehouse. The trail runs through the park connecting all current facilities, and meets up with the Tippecanoe River.

PLEASE STAY ON MARKED TRAILS.

DNR Indiana Department of Natural Resources

Prophetstown State Park sits at the edge of a tallgrass prairie that greeted American Indians and European settlers who first lived in what is now northwestern Indiana. A vast sea of tallgrass stretched as far as the eye could see. Small, open oak woodlands dotted the prairie landscape. Steep, narrow bluffs dropped to connecting rivers.

Because of the diverse landscape, native people called this land home and were willing to fight to stay.

The park is named for the village located between the rivers established by two Shawnee brothers in 1808. Tenskwatawa, also known as The Prophet, was the spiritual leader. His brother, Tecumseh, commanded the settlement's war efforts. The brothers led their group there from Ohio after pressure from white settlers had forced them to leave. Tecumseh believed the only way to repel the advance of European settlement was to form an alliance with other tribes. More than 14 tribes set aside centuries-old disputes in an effort to stop their common enemy.

Please carry out all trash you produce in order to keep your park clean and beautiful for others to enjoy!
