

The Indiana School Safety Specialist Academy presents:

“Winter Weather Awareness”

Presented by:

Mike Ryan, National Weather Service – Indianapolis

How much snow is going to fall? Will there be any ice? What time will it start and end? Should we cancel school or extracurricular activities? What happens if we are stranded on the road? Are these questions you have asked but never knew where to look for the answers? The National Weather Service will give a presentation on winter weather preparedness and safety. Valuable online tools and resources will be shared that can support decision making for school officials and help answer questions that might arise as a winter storm approaches. A National Weather Service Meteorologist will be available following the talk to answer your questions.
