GIS in Very non-Traditional Ways

Leah Harmon - ISDA

9:15 - 10:00 am

Bio:

Leah Harmon is the Director of Information Systems at the Indiana State Department of Agriculture. After growing up on a farm in Southern Indiana, she never expected to make her life's work in the agriculture industry. In her role at ISDA, Leah uses her design background to creatively solve problems and implement technology across the agency and with partners.

Abstract:

ArcGIS Online provides many ways to publicly display information, and it doesn't always have to be based around a map. Experience Builder opens up a new realm of possibilities to display information. To respond to the evolving training needs of our staff and partners, the Indiana State Department of Agriculture is developing a new training portal using Experience Builder and Survey123. This online portal consists of self-guided modules that provide information about ISDA programs, initiatives, and technical resources. Users can also test their knowledge at the end of each lesson and access additional resources to provide more context to the training topics.
