Indianapolis, Ind. (November 17, 2016) –The Indiana Bicentennial Marketplace has more than 200 items – just in time for Bicentennial holiday shopping! The Indiana Bicentennial Marketplace has something for everyone – with a bit of Indiana flair.

The Bicentennial Marketplace is an online shop that promotes Indiana-made products from Indiana businesses, craftspeople and artisans. The Marketplace is housed on the Indiana Bicentennial Commission website, www.indiana2016.org. While the items are promoted on the website, all transactions are made directly between the customer and Marketplace partner.

Items are organized in four categories on the website: Arts & Prints, Clothing & Accessories, Home & Living, and Souvenirs & Collectibles. Amongst these four categories you will not only find the official commemorative Bicentennial items – book, medal and flag – you will find a variety of products and gifts that truly highlight the creativity and skill of Indiana artists.

The Bicentennial Marketplace partners are located all over the state, representing more than 35 counties. The items are as unique as the Hoosiers who made them. The Marketplace boasts t-shirts, mugs, ornaments, jewelry, chocolates, baskets full of goodies and so much more.

So, while you are shopping this holiday season be sure to make a stop at the Bicentennial Marketplace. The Marketplace is open 24-hours a day for your shopping convenience.

About the Indiana Bicentennial Commission

Indiana’s 2016 Bicentennial celebration aims to honor our state’s 200 years of history, but to do so in a way that engages all 6.5 million Hoosiers and leaves a lasting legacy for future generations. The Commission has endorsed more than 1,400 Legacy Projects in all 92 counties that focus on the four Bicentennial pillars: youth and education, historical celebration, community involvement and nature conservation. A large emphasis throughout this year is on the health and well-being of Indiana children, as they are the true legacy of the Bicentennial. To learn more visit www.indiana2016.org.
