Parcel: 03-84-11-130-001.200-016
Assessment Year: 2016 - 2018

The Indiana Board of Tax Review (“Board”) issues this determination, finding and concluding as follows:

Procedural History

1. On April 30, 2019, Albert Schumaker filed three Form 130 petitions contesting his 2016-18 assessments, which according to his petitions were for the following values:

Year	Land	Improvements	Total
2016	$375,100	$14,200	$389,300
2017	$375,100	$13,300	$388,400
2018	$375,100	$13,300	$388,400

Schumaker checked the box indicating he was alleging a clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistake. He claimed that the Assessor incorrectly calculated the subject property’s depth.

2. The Bartholomew County Property Tax Board of Appeals (“PTABOA”) issued Form 115 determinations denying Schumaker’s appeals and significantly raising the assessments for 2017 and 2018:

Year	Land	Improvements	Total
2016	$375,100	$14,200	$389,300
2017	$457,600	$46,300	$503,900
2018	$457,600	$46,300	$503,900

3. Schumaker then filed three Form 131 petitions with the Board, electing to proceed under our rules for small claims. On February 23, 2021, Erik Jones, our designated administrative law judge (“ALJ”), held a telephonic hearing on Schumaker’s petitions. Neither he nor the Board inspected the property. Milo Smith appeared as Schumaker’s certified tax representative. The Bartholomew County Assessor, Ginny Whipple, represented herself. Johnathan Scheidt appeared as a witness for the Assessor. All three were sworn as witnesses and testified.

Objections

6. On cross examination, Smith said that he believed the intent of Indiana Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1 was to prevent taxpayers from filing correction-of-error petitions based on disputes over a property's assessed value but to enable them to file such petitions based on issues such as mathematical mistakes. The Assessor apparently took that to mean that Smith, who previously was a member of the legislature, was testifying about conversations between legislators connected to enacting the statute. She therefore objected on hearsay grounds. The ALJ took the objection under advisement.
7. We overrule the objection. We do not take Smith's answer as testimony about statements from other legislators. Instead, Smith, who was acting both as a fact witness and as Schumaker's certified tax representative, was simply answering a question about his argument that the PTABOA lacked authority to increase a property's assessed value in response to a petition for correction of a clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistake. The only reference to legislative discussions came during his response to the Assessor's objection or to her follow-up questions.

8. Even if we were to view Smith's statement as testimony about out-of-hearing assertions by other legislators—and therefore hearsay—our procedural rules allow us to admit hearsay. 52 IAC 4-6-9(d). That comes with a caveat: in reaching our final determination, we may not rely solely on hearsay that is properly objected to and that does not fall within a recognized exception to the hearsay rule. Id. But we do not rely on Smith's statements in determining these appeals. To the contrary, we rely on the appeal statute's plain language—not vague testimony regarding individual legislators' intent—in reaching our conclusions.
9. Schumaker objected to Assessor's Exhibit G-A—Johnathan Scheidt's appraisal report—on relevance grounds. According to Schumaker, because the report sets forth Scheidt's subjective valuation opinion, it is irrelevant to an appeal seeking to correct clerical, mathematical, or typographical errors. Once again, the ALJ took the objection under advisement.
10. We overrule the objection. Schumaker sought to change the property's assessed value through his appeal petitions. Although we ultimately find that he did not file his appeal petitions within the prescribed time for seeking that relief, Scheidt's appraisal was relevant to the issue Schumaker raised.

Contentions

A. Schumaker's contentions

11. The Assessor miscalculated the depth of Schumaker's lot. She listed the depth as 141 feet, when it was only 102 feet deep on the west side and 75 feet deep on the east side. The Assessor corrected the error and used the correct depth of 110 feet on the property's 2020 record card. But she did not reduce the assessed value accordingly either for that year or for any of the years under appeal. Smith testimony and argument; Pet'r Exs. 1-6.
12. Because the property has not been re-platted, the corrected measurements should apply to each of the three years in dispute. Using the corrected depth, the adjusted base rate should be $2,975 per front foot, which when multiplied by the lot's 105 feet of frontage yields a land value of $312,400. Smith testimony and argument; Pet'r Ex. 3.
13. Schumaker also argues that the PTABOA acted beyond its authority when it raised the assessment for 2017 and 2018. Indiana Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1 creates six categories of appeals. The first category involves claims of error in a property's assessed value and requires subjective judgment to resolve. According to Schumaker, a PTABOA may raise an assessment based on subjective evidence when it addresses this category of appeals. The other five categories—including claims of error based on clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistakes—are objective claims. A taxpayer has three years from when taxes are first due to file an appeal petition for claims under those categories. And a PTABOA cannot raise a property's assessed value based on subjective evidence when it addresses those appeals. Thus, even if we do not lower Schumaker's land assessment to $312,400, he asks that we reinstate the assessments to their original levels before the PTABOA raised them. Smith testimony and argument; Pet'r Ex. 1.

B. The Assessor's contentions

14. The Assessor concedes that depth measurements on the pre-2020 property record cards were wrong and would be glad to change those. But she does not believe that Schumaker could challenge the property's assessed value through an appeal seeking the correction of a clerical, mathematical, or typographical error. And she disagrees with Schumaker that the PTABOA lacked authority to raise the assessment. Whipple argument.
15. Indeed, the Assessor believes that the available evidence supports the PTABOA's valuation. Jonathan Scheidt, a certified appraiser, performed an appraisal that complied with the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice. He used the lot's corrected dimensions and valued the property at $505,000 as of all three assessment dates, which is higher than any of the assessments under appeal. Scheidt appraised the property using the sales-comparison approach. He analyzed sales from the same lake, Grandview Lake, on which the subject property is located. Because most of the lots along the lake were already developed, he looked back further than he otherwise would. He settled on four lots that sold between 2010 and 2015. Two were undeveloped, one had minimal improvements, and another had a dwelling, garage, boathouse, and dock. The lots ranged from 14,700 to 26,500 square feet, and they sold for prices ranging from $405,000 to $525,000. Whipple argument; Scheidt testimony; Resp't Ex. G-A.
16. Scheidt considered adjustments to account for relevant ways in which his comparable properties differed from the subject property, explaining that the two primary drivers of value were location on, and view of, the lake. To illustrate, he pointed to two sets of paired sales. The first involved two sales from his sales-comparison analysis. Both were vacant lots. The larger lot sold for less than the one with a superior view of the lake. A second set of paired sales showed the same thing. Although lot size is relevant, Scheidt explained that it is not as significant as location on, and view of, the lake. Scheidt testimony; Resp't Ex. G-A.
17. The adjusted prices ranged from $480,000 to $515,000. Because his fourth comparable sale was the most recent, Scheidt gave the greatest weight to its adjusted price of $503,000. He reconciled to a value of $505,000, the vast majority of which ($455,000) he attributed to the land. Scheidt testimony; Resp't Ex. G-A.

Analysis

18. At the heart of these appeals is a question over what type of relief a taxpayer may seek, and what a reviewing tribunal may order, when an appeal ostensibly raises a clerical, typographical, or mathematical mistake but really challenges its property's assessed value. The parties couch their arguments in terms of whether the appeals raised objective or subjective errors. As explained below, however, we find those arguments beside the point under the current statutory regime for property tax appeals.

19. Indiana Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1 sets different deadlines for different types of appeals. To appeal the assessed value of its property for assessment dates prior to January 1, 2019, a taxpayer had to file notice by the earlier of (1) 45 days after the date notice of assessment was mailed, or (2) 45 days after the date the tax statement was mailed. I.C. § 6-1.1-15-1.1(b)(1). By contrast, a taxpayer could file notice raising a claim of error due to a “clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistake” any time within three years after “the taxes were first due.” I.C. § 6-1.1-15-1.1 (a)(4), (b).
20. Under the old correction of error statute, and its Form 133, taxpayers were granted longer periods to raise certain challenges than under the Form 130. The Form 133 was dispatched with the repeal of Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-12 and its bifurcated recodification is under Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1 and Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-12.1. But the new statutory regime retained separate statutes of limitation for errors of assessed value and other claims of error. The disputes over the correct form have ended, but the arguments over timeliness continue.
21. Now that there is no Form 133, and the statute enabling it and the administrative rules interpreting it have been repealed, should we continue to look to the subjective/objective standard invented by the Tax Court in Hatcher v. Indiana State Bd. of Tax Comm’rs, 561 N.E.2d 852 (Ind. Tax Ct. 1990) to determine the timeliness of the new Form 130? For the following reasons, we find that we should not.
22. First, the Hatcher test was based on the New Jersey Tax Court’s analysis of that state’s correction of error statute. Hatcher, 561 N.E.2d at 855; Red Bank Borough v. New Jersey Bell Telephone Co., 8 N.J. Tax 152 (N.J. Tax Ct. 1986). The Indiana Legislature has declined to expressly codify the Hatcher test or add language similar to the New Jersey statute in the new Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1. Moreover, the legislature chose new language that must be analyzed on its own terms.
23. Second, in analyzing the Forms 130 and 133, the Indiana Supreme Court reversed the Tax Court and expressly declined to apply the Hatcher test. Lake County Prop. Tax Assessment Bd. of Appeals v. BP Amoco Corp., 820 N.E.2d 1231, 1234 n.5 (Ind. 2005); Lake County Prop. Tax Assessment Bd. of Appeals v. U.S. Steel Corp., 820 N.E.2d 1237, 1240 n. 3 (Ind. 2005). The Supreme Court determined it was “unnecessary to apply the objective/subjective distinction to resolve this case.” U.S. Steel Corp., 820 N.E.2d at 1240 n. 3.²

² Rather, it held challenges to assessed value methodology could “be made only to the current year’s assessment, not prior years’.” BP Amoco Corp., 820 N.E.2d at 1232. Because the taxpayer failed to file in the “time periods for which Form 130 was available,” it was “foreclosed from using Form 133” Id. at 1237.

24. Third, Hatcher was adopted when evidence of methodological errors constituted probative evidence of an erroneous assessment. Since then, the Town of St. John cases resulted in the promulgation of a new valuation standard, and subsequent case law established that only “objectively verifiable” evidence is sufficient to establish that an assessment is incorrect.³ Because the taxpayer must present evidence of the property’s market value in use, Hatcher has been largely rendered obsolete because merely identifying a methodological error is insufficient to challenge the assessed value.
25. Accordingly, we decline to apply Hatcher and instead follow our Supreme Court’s direction in BP Amoco and U.S. Steel. If a claim is fundamentally a challenge to the “assessed value,” the shorter statute of limitations will apply. Merely describing a challenge to assessed value as one of the other enumerated errors cannot suffice to trigger the longer statute of limitations. To allow that would ignore the legislative intent behind the separate statutes of limitation. Because the errors Schumaker has alleged challenge his property’s assessed value, he needed to file his appeals within the 45-day deadline established in Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-1.1(b)(1).
26. Although Schumaker checked the box on his Form 130 petition to indicate he was alleging a clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistake, he is really challenging the assessed value of his property. He does not seek to merely change incorrect data on his property record card, something the Assessor has agreed to do. He instead seeks to apply that corrected data to a specific valuation methodology—the mass-appraisal version of the cost approach from the 2011 Real Property Assessment Guidelines—to change the property’s assessed value. To do that, he needed to file his appeal petitions within the earlier of 45 days after its Form 11 was mailed or 45 days after its tax statement was mailed. He does not claim to have done so. To the contrary, he relies solely on the three-year window for appeals to correct clerical, mathematical, or typographical errors.
27. Of course, the PTABOA raised the original 2017 and 2018 assessments despite Schumaker’s appeals not being a valid means to contest the property’s assessed value. Schumaker therefore asks that, at a minimum, we reinstate the original assessments for those years. Although the Assessor generally agreed that taxpayers cannot use claims of clerical, mathematical, or typographical mistake to appeal a property’s assessed value, she argued that the appeal statutes did not prohibit the PTABOA from raising the assessment in response to such an appeal.
28. We disagree that the PTABOA was authorized to raise the assessments in these appeals. Although Ind. Code § 6-1.1-15-1.2(j) provides that a county PTABOA “may, based on the evidence before it, increase an assessment[,]” we do not read that language as opening a property’s assessed value to revision based on an appeal in which a taxpayer is expressly prohibited from raising that issue. And because Schumaker did not file his appeals within 45 days of the Form 11s or tax statements being mailed, he was prohibited from raising the issue of assessed value.

29. A PTABOA has other avenues to sua sponte revise assessments. See I.C. § 6-1.1-13-3 (allowing a county PTABOA to “add to the assessment lists . . . the correct assessed value of real property undervalued on . . . the lists.”); see also, I.C. § 6-1.1-9-1 (providing for a county PTABOA or other assessing officials to give notice to a taxpayer if they believe any taxable tangible property has been omitted or undervalued on the assessment rolls or tax duplicate). But it must follow the statutory procedures for doing so.
30. Because the PTABOA lacked authority to raise Schumaker’s assessments through the appeal process, the original 2017 and 2018 assessments must be reinstated.

Conclusion

31. Because Shumaker did not appeal within the time necessary to place the subject property’s assessed value at issue, we find that the original values prior to the PTABOA’s determinations must be reinstated for 2017 and 2018. We order no change to the 2016 assessment. Finally, because the Assessor proposes to change the underlying data on the property record cards to reflect the subject lot’s correct dimensions for all years at issue, we order her to do so.
