Nature of Business Relationship with Agency: The Association of Indiana Counties is a membership organization that represents local elected officials and advocates for county government. The Association of Indiana Counties does not have any contractual relationship with the Office of Lieutenant Governor nor with any of the agencies within the purview of the Office of Lieutenant Governor.

State Why Acceptance Is in the Public Interest: The director of intergovernmental affairs for the Office of Lieutenant Governor is responsible for establishing and maintaining relationships with local elected officials throughout Indiana, serving as a conduit between the lieutenant governor and local elected officials. Attendance at the Association of Indiana Counties annual conference creates efficiency in ensuring that the lieutenant governor has strong connections with local elected officials. Conference attendees represent all 92 counties and as a result, the director of intergovernmental affairs can visit with numerous elected officials at one event.
