Nature of Business Relationship with Agency:

BMV currently maintains a business relationship with Accenture that involves the review and modernization of the agency's legacy computer system.

Why acceptance is in the Public Interest:

Accenture held an International Women's Day Conference ("Conference"), titled "Equality = Innovation", on Friday, March 8, 2019 at the Indiana Statehouse. (See Attachment B). The event was free of charge for all attendees. Every attendee received a book on gender equality, which Accenture provided has a face value of $25.

The Conference included presentations by multiple speakers, including Dr. Sue Ellspermann, President of Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana and Terry Stigdon, Director of the Indiana Department of Child Services. In addition, there was a panel discussion titled, "Getting to Equal: Culture of Equality Drives Innovation." The book provided further background on the topic of gender equality and served as a takeaway for the conference attendee to use in their future endeavors.

The Conference and book served as an educational opportunity to allow the employee to further develop their knowledge and skill set. The purpose of the Conference and book was not to negotiate or secure any new contracts or amend those already in place.
