The screenshot shows a web-based e-filing interface. On the left, there is a sidebar with several sections: 'Filing Type' (EFileAndServe), 'Filing Description' (Brief of Appellant), 'Reference Number', 'Courtesy Copies', 'Related Parties' (Appellant), and 'Lead Document' (Required). The main area is partially obscured by a 'Help Info' window titled 'Document security'. This window contains the following text: 'The attorney or filer is responsible for correctly identifying whether a document is considered confidential or not confidential (i.e., public) under Administrative Rule 9. Incorrectly classifying the document security may result in the erroneous release of confidential information. Each document should be classified as:

- Confidential document under Admin. Rule 9, for confidential documents in either confidential or public cases, or
- Public document, for public documents in public cases.

Notice regarding Public Documents: You will be required to agree to a submission disclaimer that states: I acknowledge that a document marked as a public document may be posted on the Internet. Please see the E-Filing Instructions page for more information.

 At the bottom of the interface, a document upload area is visible. It shows a file named 'Sample Document - Brief.pdf' (21.19 kB) with a description field containing the same name. To the right of the description is a 'Security' dropdown menu currently set to 'Public document'. A red arrow points to a question mark icon next to the dropdown, which is highlighted with a grey background.

Submission Agreements

- I did not combine multiple documents into one PDF file
- If I filed any Proposed Orders, I submitted them with separate filing codes
- If I filed any documents considered confidential under Admin. Rule 9, I set the document security to confidential and, if applicable, submitted a Notice of Exclusion
- I acknowledge that a document marked as a public document may be posted on the Internet.
