Dear Recommender,

This student is an applicant for the Indiana Conference for Legal Education Opportunity (ICLEO) Program. ICLEO is a program of the Indiana Supreme Court intended to help minority, low-income, and educationally disadvantaged Indiana college graduates pursue a law degree. Selected students begin by attending a 6-week residential Summer Institute that introduces them to the rigors of law school. Successful graduates of the program enroll in an Indiana law school and receive an annual stipend for three years.

Applicants are requested to provide two letters of recommendation to complete their application from professors, former employers, or other professionals who have personal knowledge of the academic performance, intellectual potential for success, and potential to benefit from ICLEO programs.
