(C) Voir Dire Examination by Counsel. Following voir dire examination of the jury venire by the Court, an appropriate number of prospective jurors, as determined by the Court, shall be seated in the jury box. Counsel will, then, be permitted an opportunity to conduct voir dire examination. The questions asked by counsel on voir dire shall be limited to the extent possible to those questions bearing upon the qualification of the prospective jurors not adequately covered by the questions and answers contained in the completed juror questionnaire or previous questions posed by the Court and answers thereto. Plaintiff shall first examine the jurors and temporarily pass them to defendant for examination.

(D) Challenges. After the defendant has examined the prospective jurors seated in the jury box, counsel shall approach the bench and either accept the prospective jurors or make challenges for cause or peremptory challenges out of hearing of the prospective jurors. If prospective jurors are excused, the process described in paragraph (C) of this rule shall be repeated for newly called prospective jurors until the jury has been accepted or all available peremptory challenges have been exhausted.

(E) Multiple Parties. In cases involving multiple plaintiffs or defendants, the details of the voir dire procedure will be determined by the Court at final pre-trial conference.
