Indiana Bicentennial

It is going to be the 200th anniversary of Indiana soon so I would like to celebrate the Bicentennial by having a party. First I would research our state by going to the public library and discovering all of the famous people in Indiana. For the party, my family will dress up like one of the famous people I discovered. I would also have a dinner with many corn related foods since our state grows a lot of corn. Some examples are corn bread, corn on the cob, and corn pudding.

I would also make a game where my family is trying to find the ninety-two counties of Indiana. The counties would be hidden around my house for people to find. Watching Indiana videos would be another pastime. One of the final activities of the party would be having a private torch relay. The torch would be plastic with the same number of stars as the ones on the Indiana flag and it would have a bison on it since that is on our state seal and a cardinal because that is our state bird.

My family and I will also go to the Bicentennial Train to discover what is inside it.
