Substance use disorder (SUD) is a treatable mental disorder that affects a person's brain and behavior, leading to their inability to control their use of substances like legal or illegal drugs, alcohol, or medications. Symptoms can be moderate to severe, with addiction being the most severe form of SUD.

Treatment and recovery are possible. Step into a life free of addictive substances and onto a path of recovery. The journey may seem impossible but be assured that recovery is possible. This disease called substance use disorder has affected many people from all walks of life. Substance Use Disorder is defined a treatable mental disorder that affects a person's brain and behavior, leading to their inability to control their use of certain substances like legal or illegal drugs or alcohol. Substance use disorder is not an indication of a weak moral compass. If left untreated, it can destroy the lives of those affected.

Recovery is a process supported by many families, friends, communities, agencies, and people already walking on the path of recovery. Recovery is a statement of courage and hope. Today we are so fortunate to have programs available that are working together with the goal of demonstrating a united front. Whether you are a person with a substance use disorder, or the loved one of someone with this disorder, you have the ability to begin your own journey of recovery. Please join us in this front of unity, possibility, and hope.

The list of facilities and services in this guide does not imply a recommendation or endorsement of the listing. This guide is provided for informational use only. For the most up-to-date information about facilities and their services, please contact the facility directly.

RESOURCES

Treatment Facilities

Once you or your loved one are ready to seek treatment, we hope this guide can assist you with choosing a plan or treatment facility. We encourage you to do your own research of any facility you plan to use, as this guide is intended as a resource, but not a recommendation. Please take time to check out prospective treatment facilities. Below are some helpful tips when looking into a treatment program and/or facility.

Look for the following accreditations:

- The Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF) is an international, independent, not-for-profit organization that accredits providers of human services. Its mission is to provide and ensure the quality and value of the services provided.
- The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) standards for hospital accreditation provide measurable performance goals that help provide high quality care for patients.
- The Division of Mental Health and Addiction (DMHA) sets care standards for the provision of mental health and addiction services to Hoosiers. DMHA is committed to ensuring that clients have access to quality services that promote individual, family, and community resiliency and recovery.

Look for qualified and licensed professionals on staff including mental health counselors, social workers, recovery coaches, peer recovery specialists, and psychiatrists.

Use the internet to search the facility, read their reviews, call, and ask for a tour if applicable.

Contact someone familiar with the facility and obtain recommendations.

Treatment Facilities May Provide:

Detox/Inpatient Treatment is the most intense level of treatment, offering 24-hour care in a clinical or hospital setting. The main goal is to stabilize symptoms while developing a continuing treatment plan. Some inpatient facilities offer medically supervised detoxification. This stage of treatment is often 3-7 days.

Residential Treatment is a live-in home-like facility that provides therapy, groups, education and individual interventions for substance use disorder. This stage of treatment is often 21-28 days minimum and can include withdrawal management if needed.

Outpatient Treatment is a primary treatment program recommended for those who do not need hospitalization or residential treatment. This stage of treatment often follows a residential program for ongoing support. It can include therapy, SUD group and recovery coaching.

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT), also called Medication Assisted Recovery, is the practice of using a combination of medication, counseling, and behavioral therapy to treat substance use disorder.

Recovery Residences In its Working Definition of Recovery, SAMHSA delineates that housing or having a home— a stable and safe place to live—is one of the major dimensions that support a life in recovery.

National Alliance for Recovery Residences' (NARR) four levels of housing range from those that are peer run to those that are clinically focused. Recovery housing meets nationally recognized standards (e.g., Oxford House, Inc. and NARR). For more information on locating a recovery residence, please visit:

<https://inarr.org/dmha-certified-recovery-residence-locator/>

For SAMHSA's publication on recovery residences and levels of care, please visit:

<https://store.samhsa.gov/sites/default/files/pep23-10-00-002.pdf>

This is not intended to be a comprehensive guide of all facilities and options, but rather a starting point for the programs in the central and south central Indiana area. We encourage you to call and ask as many questions as you need to find a right fit for you or your loved one. For more information on treatment options, please also search the following:

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

Detoxification (detox) is a process in which the body removes the toxic substances or qualities. During this period, the symptoms of withdrawal are also treated. Detoxification is the primary step in any substance use treatment program. It is used as the initial phase in treating alcohol, benzodiazepine, opioid, and stimulant addictions. The goal of detoxification is to clear the toxins out of the body so that the body can adjust and heal

Harm Reduction includes strategies aimed at reducing negative consequences associated with drug use and other risky behaviors. Efforts to decrease the health risks of people who use drugs include syringe service programs, through which used syringes can be exchanged for new sterile syringes. People who use utilize these programs can be connected with other social and medical services. Programs may also provide other supplies and counseling aimed at lowering the risk of infectious disease and fatality. Harm Reduction is also a movement for social justice and the reform of current drug policies built on a belief in, and respect for, the rights of people who use drugs.

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT), also called Medication Assisted Recovery, is the practice of using a combination of medication, counseling, and behavioral therapy to treat substance use disorders. Studies show that this combination offers most patients the greatest chance of attaining and sustaining lasting sobriety. Use of medications during recovery is focused on reducing withdrawal symptoms that would otherwise lure the patient back to using the substance while, at the same time, reducing the patient's cravings. During the time that the withdrawal symptoms and cravings are managed by the medication, it is expected that the patient will participate in counseling and behavior therapy. Your health care provider can provide more information about Medication Assisted Recovery options.

The following medications may be used for alcohol and opioid addiction: Methadone, Buprenorphine, Naltrexone, Disulfiram, and Acamprosate.

Methadone is an opiate. It's long acting and blocks the effects of other opiates. It reduces cravings and withdrawals.

Buprenorphine suppresses and reduces cravings for opioid drugs. It can come in a pill form or sublingual tablet that is placed under the tongue. The prescription is sold as Suboxone, Subutex or Zubsolv.

Naltrexone is an opioid antagonist used to treat alcohol and opioid dependence. It is used primarily in the treatment of alcohol use disorder to prevent cravings. In the treatment of opioid dependence naltrexone is used to block the euphoric effects of opioid drugs such as heroin, morphine, codeine, and methadone. The prescription is sold as Vivitrol, ReVia or Depade.

Disulfiram is a medication that treats chronic alcoholism. It is most effective in people who have already gone through detoxification or are in the initial stage of abstinence. The prescription is sold as Antabuse.

Acamprosate is a medication for people in recovery who have already stopped drinking alcohol and want to avoid drinking. It works to prevent people from drinking alcohol. The prescription is sold as Campral.

Outpatient Treatment is a primary treatment program recommended for those who do not need medically supervised detoxification. Outpatient treatment can help people in recovery to continue their treatment on a part-time yet intensive schedule, designed to accommodate work and family life. It is also utilized after an individual's discharge from a residential treatment program.

Residential Treatment generally indicate a live-in health care facility that provides therapy for substance use disorder. Many also provide detoxification and continued care into outpatient services. Residential facilities offer a more comfortable home-like environment. Treatment is structured and monitored. Medical staff is available to assist patients, but not with the same intensity as inpatient treatment. Programs are longer in duration than inpatient treatment.

Sober Living and Transitional Housing refers to group homes for people with substance use disorder who desire sober living in a structured, safe environment. Both offer refuge from triggers and allow residents to put newly learned skills into practice. They usually have an onsite manager and/or counselor who coordinates daily activities. Residents must follow certain rules, attend recovery meetings, and may be subject to random drug tests to prove they are sober.

Sober living and Transitional Housing have many similarities, but there is a difference.

Transitional Housing helps a person who has lived in a restrictive environment such as inpatient care or prison, to make a transition back into a less restrictive environment.

Substance use disorder according to NIMH (National Institute on Mental Health) Substance use disorder (SUD) is a treatable mental disorder that affects a person's brain and behavior, leading to their inability to control their use of substances like legal or illegal drugs, alcohol, or medications. Symptoms can be moderate to severe, with addiction being the most severe form of SUD. It is not a sign of weak moral character or lack of willpower.

Substance use disorder develops gradually over time. A person may begin to ignore activities they once enjoyed in order to seek out the substance that gives them the intense pleasure or "high" they constantly crave. Eventually, one will need more and more of the substance to get to an intoxicated, euphoric state. When a person who uses substances is "under the influence" it can affect their thinking, judgment, emotions, and behavior. It can also lead to breathing problems, psychosis, seizures, coma, and death.

It can be very hard for someone with substance use disorder to admit or even recognize that they have a problem.

According to the U.S Department of Health and Human Services, signs of substance use disorder include:

- Change in friends and hangouts
- Changes in mood, motivation, attitude
- Absenteeism at work or school
- Increased need for cash
- Bloodshot eyes, enlarged, or constricted pupils
- Sudden weight changes (gain or loss)
- Tremors in hands
- Ignoring once-loved activities

Behavior changes in substance use disorder can include:

- Being secretive about substance use, hiding, or lying about it
- Not showing up to important events or obligations
- Craving and seeking out the substance or behavior
- Needing to use more often to achieve the same pleasure or high
- Experiencing physical symptoms of withdrawal when not using (vomiting, muscle aches, sweating, tremors, fever, diarrhea, yawning, insomnia) or psychological symptoms (anger, upset, sadness)
- Changing daily routine to allow more time or opportunity to use
- Selling belongings to get cash or taking out cash advances on credit cards
- Neglecting self-care and hygiene

Recovery Support Groups function to help people who share the same disorder or circumstance work through issues. They meet voluntarily, are peer-led, and typically meet on a set schedule. Members are allowed to remain anonymous. Underlying almost all support groups is the premise of non-judgmental attitudes and caring for one another.

Withdrawal symptoms result from either the sudden removal of, or abrupt decrease in the regular dosage of a drug. The symptoms of withdrawal can vary greatly from one drug to the next. Acute withdrawal from drugs and alcohol can be unpleasant and dangerous. For this reason, supervised medical detox in a hospital or inpatient rehab center is often advised to ensure safety.

Alcohol withdrawal is dangerous and should not be carelessly handled, or done without close medical attention. Depending on the severity of alcohol use, symptoms can appear just a few hours after the last drink, but can last for as long as a week. Symptoms can progress over the course of time to seizures or another quite serious condition known as delirium tremens (DTs), which can include signs of marked confusion, agitation, hallucination and violent tremors of the arms and legs. Other, less severe symptoms can include shakiness, increased heart rate, fever, sweating, high blood pressure, and anxiety.

Benzodiazepines withdrawal (benzos) like Valium, Ativan and Xanax, to name a few, can have a potentially life threatening withdrawal syndrome similar to that of alcohol. The period of withdrawal from benzos is exceedingly long and can take anywhere from a week to a month before symptoms subside. Withdrawal symptoms include heightened anxiety, elevated blood pressure and heart rate, delirium, hallucination, and potentially seizures.

Opiate/opioid withdrawal is very uncomfortable but doesn't carry the severity of risks characteristic of alcohol and benzodiazepines. Those withdrawing from opiates such as heroin and opioid drugs such as OxyContin and hydrocodone, to name a few, can experience the following symptoms: chills and sweats, sleeplessness, runny eyes and nose, muscle aches and cramps, nausea and vomiting, and fever.

Stimulant withdrawal (cocaine, amphetamines, methamphetamine, or medications such as methylphenidate or Ritalin) can last about 1 to 2 weeks. Physical withdrawal from stimulants is not dangerous in most cases. People tend to be moody, sleepy, and hungry as they rebound from the effects of the stimulants. Emotionally, however, people can find themselves quite depressed and at risk for suicide or other self-harm.

MYTH BUSTERS

There are many misunderstandings about substance use disorder. Below are some of the most common myths about addiction followed by correct information.

MYTH: Addiction is a choice.

TRUTH: Recovery is not as simple as exercising enough willpower. People do not choose to become addicted. Genetics make up about half the risk of addiction; environmental factors such as family life, upbringing, and peer influences make up the other half.

Brain imaging studies show that differences in the brain are both a cause and effect of addiction. Long before drugs enter the picture, there are neurobiological differences in people who become addicted compared to those who do not become addicted. Once an individual starts using drugs, prolonged drug use changes the structure and function of the brain, making it difficult to control impulses, feel pleasure from natural rewards, and focus on anything other than getting and using drugs.

MYTH: People who become dependent on drugs or alcohol are bad people.

TRUTH: Man or woman, rich or poor, young, or old, if a person develops an addiction, there is a widespread assumption that they are bad, weak-willed, immature, or immoral.

Changes in the brain brought on by prolonged drug use do affect the character of those suffering from Substance Use Disorder but this does not make them “bad”.

Sick people need a treatment program to get better.

MYTH: There is only one way to recover from addiction.

TRUTH: One thing that has become obvious in recent years is that there are many ways to help people escape an addiction, and there is no one way that works for everyone. Just because a recovery path has worked well for one individual does not mean that it is going to work for someone else. The prior one size fits all approach to recovery is no longer widely accepted by the experts in the recovery community. This will likely mean that more individuals will find the path that is right for them.

MYTH: If treatment is forced, it will fail.

TRUTH: Treatment does not have to be voluntary to be successful. People who are persuaded into treatment by their family, employer, or the legal system can benefit as much as those who enter treatment voluntarily. Clarity comes with abstinence from substance use, which can help foster change.

MYTH: Once people enter recovery their problems will be over.

TRUTH: Giving up substance use is a wonderful start, but it is not the end of the process. It would be more realistic to say that abstinence from “using” is the first step in a journey that never really ends. The further along the path of recovery the individual travels, the better their ability is to “cope” or accept life on life’s terms. There is no real graduation day. Many people with addiction problems may experience relapse and begin using again before eventually quitting for good. Recovery is a process, not an event.
